The Spiritualist church of Love.Light and Truth

We are a Church, but we are not a Religion for whilst we share the basic tenets of all religions, which is the belief in the great loving power that we all call God, and the love for our fellow men and of everlasting life, we differ from them in that we do not share any of their creeds or dictates, nor do we have any hierarchy either within, or outside of this Church, and we have no paid servants. We are a Church run by the people, for the people, and give a warm welcome to all who wish to attend. We do not question your religion or try to convert you to our way of understanding, nor do we say, or do, anything to offend your beliefs, for our way of serving God is not by preaching or promoting religious doctrine but by serving our fellow men through love, healing and compassion, regardless of their race or religion, for we understand, and accept, that we are all part of God's family whatever pathway we have chosen through this life

National Coastwatch Institution

NATIONAL COASTWATCH Registered Charity Number 1045645 Eyes along the Coast The National Coastwatch Institution (NCI) was set up in 1994 to restore a visual watch along the coast. Many small coastguard stations had been forced to close down but when two fishermen lost their lives off the Cornish coast directly below the abandoned coastguard lookout at Bass Point on the Lizard local people became concerned. Together they raised money to reopen the abandoned watch station and NCI was born. Today there are 30 operational Stations around the British coast from Cornwall to Wearside. The Herne Bay NCI station is situated on Eastern Esplanade approximately 200 yards to the east of Herne Bay Sailing Club. It is manned by a team of fully trained volunteers, keeping watch at Weekends and Bank Holidays, during most daylight hours. The Station is equipped with telescopes, telephone, weather instruments, up to date charts and radar. Watchkeepers are the eyes and ears along the coast, keeping a visual watch, monitoring radio channels and providing a listening watch in poor visibility. Our NCI watchkeepers are trained to deal with emergencies and report directly to the Maritime Coastguard Agency (MCA). A log is kept of all activities and local weather conditions passed on to those requiring them. The Herne Bay NCI station is aiming to acquire Declared Facility Status in order to become an integral part of the National Search and Rescue Organisation. Our Watchkeepers offer a wide variety of skills and experience and full training ensures that the high standards set by both the NCI and MCA are met. A regular commitment is essential and there are currently 28 volunteers (20% of them women) keeping watch. NCI offers around 1,800 hours of organised coastal surveillance per year at no cost to the public! The National Coastwatch Institution is a completely voluntary organisation. It does not receive any funding from Government, Local Authorities or central funds. Each branch is responsible for raising its own funds for the purchase of equipment, charts and running costs of the Watchstation. The Herne Bay Branch is actively seeking new volunteers in order to increase our watch keeping days to 4 per week.
